NITROGLYCERINE BLAST NEAR NEWARK

COUNTRYSIDE IS SHAKEN BY FORCE OF EXPLOSION.

Three Men Battle Flames
Near Other Magazines—
Hole 50 Feet Deep and 100 Feet in Diameter Was Torn in the Ground—Acid
House Completely Destroyed.

Five hundred and forty quarts of nitroglycerine exploded at the Marietta Machine and Torpedo factory, located in a deep rock bound valley 12 miles east of Newark, Sunday afternoon.

So far as is known none was killed, but L. C. King, manager of the plant; Roy Garrison, of Newark and Mr. King's son-in-law, Frank Offenberger, narrowly escaped. They were on their way to the magazine to obtain nitro for a nearby oil well. They arrived only 15 minutes after the explosion and were ignorant of the extreme danger, when they entered the woods, which surrounds the magazine. Trees and leaves were afire and burning rapidly toward a frame magazine house.

The three men did not have time to escape and were forced to fight the fires to save their lives.

A hole 50 feet deep and 100 yards in diameter was torn in the ground. The flames set fire to a rail fence 500 yards away and it was consumed within a few minutes.

The mixing house of the plant was totally destroyed by the force of the explosion. Only a few bits of twisted machinery were left standing. A hole was torn in the ground about 50 feet deep and 100 yards in diameter. An acid house literally was torn to pieces.

The frame magazine house which was threatened by the flames stands about 50 yards from the acid house. It contains 41 two and one-half gallon cans of nitroglycerine. Four of these were thrown to the floor without exploding. The building was not damaged.

One hundred yards further up the road a brick magazine was also unharmed. It contained 46 two and one-half gallon cans of nitro.

CHANGE DATE OF CONCERT AT TARLTON.

The date of the concert to be given by Mr. Bernard Anderson at the Tarlton Community House has been changed to Saturday, April 4, instead of April 3. Please bear this in mind and plan to hear Mr. Anderson. He has a rare musical treat in store for you.

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL.

William Heffner was taken to Columbus this morning in Mader & Ebert's invalid car to Mt. Carmel hospital. He was accompanied by his son, Frank Heffner and Dr. G. W. Heffner. It is thought he has pneumonia.

DODD FUNERAL.

The funeral of Mrs. Margaret Dodd, who died at the State hospital Friday, will be held at the Albaugh undertaking parlors Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. S. W. Hiles will officiate. Burial in the cemetery near Mount Sterling.

HOME FROM HOSPITAL.

Mrs. Ernest Thomas, who has been a patient at Grant hospital Columbus, the past month, has arrived home.

Losses caused by the explosion will amount to more than $25,000, unprotected by insurance. The cause of the blast has not been ascertained.

Several men working at the Everett gas wells at Black Hand, about a mile away from the scene of the explosion, were knocked down by the concussion but were not hurt. Windows in houses for a distance of a mile in every direction were shattered. Huge trees were torn down near the scene of the blast. Buildings in Hanover, Claylick, To-Bosc, Black Hand, Blackrun and other nearby villages were shaken.

DAUGHTER OF "JOE" GEISER PASSED AWAY.

End Came Last Week at Her Home in Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

The death of Miss Ruth Stewart Geiger, at her home in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, last week calls to mind old time politicians, says the Columbus Dispatch.

Miss Geiger was one of the three daughters of the late General Joseph H. Geiger, for many years active in Republican politics in Columbus and for several years the librarian of the state library. He was familiarly known as "Joe" Geiger, and many still remember his humorous lecture on "Snapping Turtles" which he delivered over and over again thruout Ohio in his later years. The two surviving daughters of General Geiger are Mrs. Lydia Milne of 365 East Gay street, Columbus, and Miss Eliza Geiger of Lancaster, Pennsylvania, at whose home Miss Ruth Geiger's death took place. General Geiger is survived also by a grandson, W. L. Milne, who is an officer in the U. S. navy, a graduate of Annapolis.

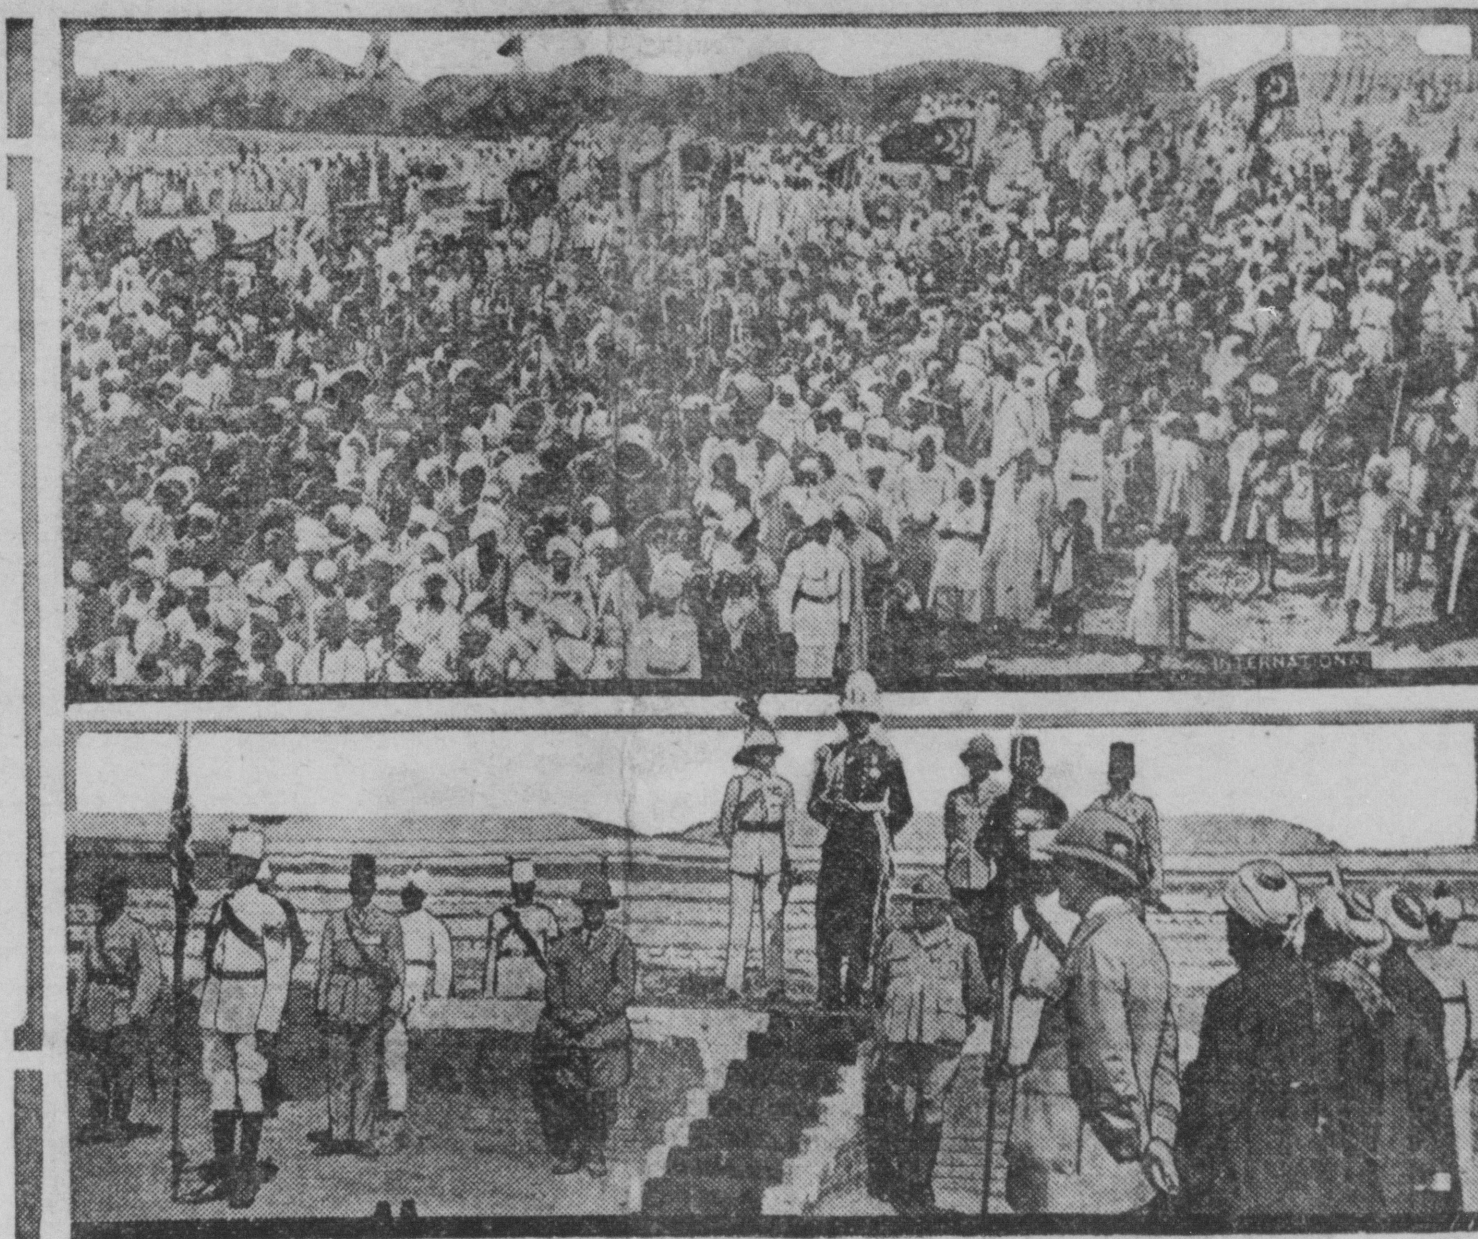

Joe Geiger, the father, was well known in this city. Many stories are told of his wealth of humor, wit and shrewdness.

MRS. S. PARKER GILBERT

Louise Ross Todd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Todd of Louisville, Ky., and niece of Mme. Christian Hauge, Washington society woman, was married recently to S. Parker Gilbert, agent general of reparations.

YOUNG DUNN WON HONORS IN SCHOOL.

Among the twelve graduates of Ohio State university, who have entered Harvard graduate school and passed the examination with honors and won distinction is Eagleton F. Dunn Jr., of Columbus, a nephew of Mrs. Clark K. Hunsicker, of this city. Winning of the distinction entitles the student to listing among honored students which is published by Harvard university for business men over the country.

CIRCLEVILLE IN DARKNESS SATURDAY.

Short Circuit at Railroad Caused No End of Trou

The city was in total darkness for about an hour and a half Saturday evening and intermittently until nearly nine o'clock.

The light first came on in flashes and finally the north side of the city was furnished with electricity, but south of Main street there was no illumination.

The trouble was found this morning by Manager Charles T. Gilmore of the Ohio Utilities company. A grounded guard wire hanging over the tracks of the Norfolk & Western railroad touched the secondary wire that furnishes a portion of the current to the business district and this put the city in darkness.

The Ohio Utilities company did its level best to find the trouble. Every available lineman was called into service and they worked all day Sunday, but were unable to find the cause until this morning.

Miss Frances Mason is spending her spring vacation with Miss Helen Hancher at Cleveland.

WASHINGTON WON OUT IN SPELLING BEE.

Logan Elm Grange Submitted Only Few Samples
Out of Many.

Among the interesting gatherings within the month was the regular meeting of Washington Grange, No. 2240, which was held Friday evening, March 20. After the business meeting short talks were given by Marvin Steely, master of Logan Elm Grange, and Mrs. Charles A. Dresbach.

The literary hour was featured by an "Old Fashioned Spelling Bee" by Washington and Logan Elm Granges. The attendance was large, coming from a large radius to participate in it. Enthusiasm reigned thruout, while Harry Groce acted as pronouncer. The spellers gradually dwindled down and every minute brought more excitement to the contest which finally ended with D. C. Heffner, member of Washington Grange as the champion speller. However, Logan Elm is to be congratulated for its excellent spellers, as we were told that they had brought only a few of their samples to show us how to spell, but declared that it would be a splendid idea for us to have more such meetings at more frequent intervals.

The occasion was a very merry one and refreshments terminated a very pleasant evening.

At the next meeting the program will be "Students' Night" and all members are urged to be present.

MAYOR'S COURT.

Lafayette Eby, a drunk and disorderly, was brought in and given a fine of $10 and costs on the charge by Mayor Fitzpatrick. The fine and costs amounting to $18.70 was paid and he was discharged.

STILLBORN CHILD.

A stillborn child was born to Thompson and Nettie G. Shoemaker Ross, of 440 East Union street, Saturday. Burial was made in the Hitler-Ludwig cemetery Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

SALTCREEK GRANGERS IN SESSION.

The members of Saltcreek Valley grange visited the regular meeting of the Tri-County grange Tuesday evening, March 17. At the close of the grange meeting, Mr. George Dix, agriculture teacher at the Saltcreek school, gave the third of a series of talks on raising baby chicks.

The evening ended with a supper served by the members of both granges. The fourth and last talk by Mr. Dix will be given at Saltcreek grange March 24.

EDWARD SIMPSON

Rear Admiral Edward Simpson of Maryland, who retired recently from the navy under the arbitrary age limit fixed by congress, on the same day celebrated his sixty-fourth birthday and the completion of nearly 100 years of naval service by men of his family.

Miss Faith Chaffin of Columbus, who has been spending the weekend with relatives at New Holland has returned home.

DR. J. B. MAY GIVEN HONOR IN COLUMBUS.

Has Taken Part in Various Meetings of Profession in Other Cities.

Dr. John B. May was made an honorary member of the Academy of Medicine, of Columbus, at a medical meeting in that city Thursday evening.

This is indeed a signal honor and his many friends in this section of the state will be glad to know of the recognition the doctor has been given. His years of successful practice with the exceptional condition of his physique for a man of his age are partly accountable for his most recent prominent appointment.

Dr. May had been called to Columbus to deliver an address at the General Practitioners Medical society meeting. This was an important meeting and was largely attended by men of the medical profession. The subject of his address was: "The Old Family Doctor as a Specialist."

This is not the first time Dr. May has been upon a medical program in Columbus. He is well and favorably known there and has taken part in various meetings of his profession in Columbus, as well as in other cities. —New Holland Leader.

TAKEN TO MERCY HOSPITAL.

C. Dwight Rector, of Kinderhook, was taken to Mercy hospital, Columbus Friday evening in C. E. Hill's invalid car. He underwent an operation for appendicitis and is recovering nicely. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Rector, were with him during the operation.

PNEUMONIA CAUSED DEATH MARY WORK.

Passed Away at Mt. Carmel
Hospital—Burial at Williamsport Wednesday

Miss Mary Work, of 1305 Courtland avenue, Columbus, formerly of this city, died at Mt. Carmel hospital this morning at six o'clock. She had been ill only a few days and her death was due to bronchial pneumonia.

The deceased was born in Monroe township, this county, February 8, 1865, and was a daughter of Wesley and Katharine Groves Work.

Miss Work was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and was a former member of Circleville chapter, Order of the Eastern Star. After removing to Columbus, she became a member of Lorraine chapter, the White Shrine and the Columbus Woman's club.

She is survived by one sister and four brothers. They are Mrs. Jessie F. Miller, of Darbyville; J. Steptoe Work and Claude W. Work, of Denver, Colorado; T. B. Work, of Ensley, Alabama, and P. G. Work, of Williamsport.

The funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the residence of her sister, Rev. R. L. Cross will officiate. Interment in Springlawn cemetery, Williamsport.

All Things to All Men

There is significance in the story that Joseph had a coat of many colors. He became later the greatest politician in Egypt.—Columbia Record.

Origin of Coat of Arms

Coats of arms originated from the insignia formerly embroidered on a cloth and worn by the ancient knights over their armor to make them conspicuous in battle. Those having coats of arms nowadays have them by inheritance, which can sometimes be traced through Herald's college, London, England, which institution sometimes grants coats of arms to modern persons who can show they have means to maintain the dignity of such a bestowal.

Parisian Chair Menders

Paris still has its "old chair men" who give an old-time aspect to the streets as they go about collecting old chairs which they take away to be repaired. Some ride bicycles, which become piled high like a pyramid before the mender starts on the home stretch.

Human Mind

Culture is more diffused in some places than in others; but the individual mind is quite independent of both place and time. It is a rather startling fact that from the earliest dawn of history to the present moment the individual human mind has increased not one grain in power and intelligence.—William Lyon Phelps in Scribner's Magazine.

Famous Jewish Woman

Deborah, the wife of Lapideth, was one of the earliest judges of Israel and urged the Israelites to rise against the Canaanites, who had oppressed them for generations. Barak, leader of the Israelites, refused to go into battle unless accompanied by Deborah. With a small force she triumphed over the Canaanites. "The Song of Deborah" is considered a masterpiece of Hebrew literature.

Principle of Memory

Memory is the power to revive again in our minds those ideas which after imprinting have disappeared, or have been laid aside out of sight.

Spring plowing has commenced. So also has your troubles. A few years ago a broken casting meant days of delay but now things are different.

I fix them while you wait. It is a common occurrence for valves to break in Ford tractors and push a hole thru the cylinder head. Instead of paying $14 for a new one, bring me the broken one and for $5 difference I will sell you a new one.

I fix anything in metal. Ask to see my automatic hog waterers.

SQUALID HOUSE IS KING'S TOMB

Remains of Former Ruler of Greece Rest in Tawdry Environment.

Naples.—Many kings and statesmen have fallen from their high estates as a result of the World war. William Hohenzollern, mightiest of them all, resides in Doorn, passing away his declining years as a woodcutter. The sultan of the Turks maintains a humble abode near Lausanne, while the ex-king of Bulgaria is a refugee in Germany.

Two have died in exile—Emperor Charles of Austro-Hungary, who passed away in the Azores, and King Constantine of Greece, who actually died of a broken heart on the Isle of Sicily. And Constantine, the proudest, though not the mightiest, has suffered the saddest plight of all.

Surroundings Humble.

Today Constantine's body rests amid surroundings that not one of his humblest subjects would have tolerated in days gone by. In a room entirely bare of all furniture except the coarse wooden platform upon which the coffin rests, the corpse of the ex-king of the Greeks awaits her Tag in Naples.

The house, close to the Greek Orthodox church, is on the narrow, dingy Via Chiesi. Only a few months ago it was a dive of ill-repute, the rendezvous of tawdry femmes de rue. Cheap wine shops and rag pickers' hovels characterize the vicinity.

Now and then a gendarme guards the entrance, but more often there is none to close the door to the morbidly curious who might care to view the remains. A few centavos would even permit a sightseer to carry away one of the withered wreaths that, dry and musty, are piled around the coffin.

How long Constantine's body will rest in its present disrepute is problematical. The priest at the Greek church shakes his head sadly when asked the question. He explains that his former sovereign was brought to Naples amid all the pomp and paupers rendered a ruling monarch after his death in Sicily.

Greeted With Pomp.

The king and queen of Italy sent flowers; the rulers of the Balkan states through proxies paid homage and the Greek royalists vowed at the bier to restore the dynasty wrecked by the Venizelists.

Then the Athens revolutionary government, which had driven "Tino" into exile after he had failed miserably at carrying out his grandiose promise to plant the banner of the Greek over St. Sophia in Constantinople and restore the Byzantine empire once more, refused even to allow his body to be brought back to Greek soil. They were taking no chances with the volatile Greek temperament, which voted 95 per cent for his return from his first exile in Switzerland in 1920.

Repeated requests to inter the body beneath the shadow of the Acropolis, or on the royal estate at Tatoi, near Athens, met with curt refusals by the republicans. Then the priest grew weary of having the corpse in the chapel, so, for a few lire a week, he rented the disreputable house close by.

And it is there that "Tino" now awaits The Day.

MAN WHO ROBBED TWAIN

Henry Williams, reformed burglar and author of "In the Clutch of Circumstance," the story of his own life of crime and reformation, whose recent speech in Hartford, Conn., aroused protests from the head of the Connecticut state prison board. Williams, now a successful business man of Brooklyn, is crusading against the contract labor system and advocates the use of state prisoners to build state roads. He is known as "Mark Twain's burglar," as it was for robbing the home of the author at Stormfield, Conn., that he was sentenced to prison.

Material for Buttons
Vegetable Ivory, a material from which buttons are made, is collected chiefly in South America and Africa. From the former comes the corozo nut, the commonest sort of vegetable ivory, while Africa grows a strange apple which in due course hardens to the hardness of ivory. Thousands of these nuts and apples are converted into buttons every year.

In Famous Expedition
The expedition, headed by Lewis and Clark, sent out by President Jefferson to explore the Louisiana Purchase, had originally 29 members. At St. Louis 16 men joined for part of the trip. Of these 14 were sent back with collections and reports, but two recruits were added, making a party of 33 on the far western march.

Tracing Arabian Numerals
Arabian numerals were introduced into Spain about the close of the Tenth century by the Moors or Arabs, who got them as early as the Sixteenth century from the Hindoos. Before that time, little is known about them. They did not come into general use in Europe until the Sixteenth century.

Pearl Superstition
There is an old superstition that pearls are the congealed tears of heaven. There was a belief in the East that at the full moon the pearl oyster rose to the surface of the sea and opened to receive falling dew-drops from heaven, which hardened into pearls.

New Hats Modish, But Not Extreme

Models for New Season Display Art and Beauty, Writer Says.

A designer of millinery who is reckoned an authority on style is quoted as paraphrasing thus: "Let me make the hats of a season and I care not who makes the gowns."

The bonnet, observes a fashion writer in the New York Times, has been important since the time when headgear became a part of woman's dress. From the Highlander's covering, so described, to the suave and dashing hats of Gainsborough's creating is a far cry. Many fearful and wonderful things were fashioned in that interim. Those were the days, first and last, when the picture quality was of supreme importance, and milliners made hats according to an ideal, however crude it seems to us in this day and generation, and with a definite standard of taste and style. Convention was rigorous and imposed limitations, but none that contrasted altogether with the change in fashion that characterizes the latest modes.

Nothing but a hat has such possibilities of beauty or the reverse, of flatness or the most depressing effect. Nothing in the illustrations of old-time styles is funnier, from the viewpoint of today's smart styles, than the hat rested high on an elaborate coiffure, like a boat tossed and left upon the rocks. That and the bonnet our grandmothers or our great-grandmothers wore over satiny locks, drawn over the ears, and with wide ribbons tied under the chin, are among the museum treasures of now. Just what the gentlewoman who dressed in this fashion would have thought of the freakish extremes of the last few years is not easily imagined.

Hat fashion seems to have been a matter of eliminating, of modifying extremes, only to touch, as is usual, the extreme opposite. One year hats grow from the infinitesimal to the ample and then to the enormous. With something like intoxication popular fancy holds to that mode until it is expressed in cheap adaptations, and then the swing to the other extreme begins.

Reversals are accepted, usually, by only a few. The crowd invariably waits to see. Then, when once a mode is established, the crowd follows the leader blindly, grasping whatever is said to be the latest thing, often oblivious to the requisites of taste and becomingness.

Interest in the Cloche.
This, doubtless, is the way in which the cloche came to be. It was the first concession made to utter sacrifice of the beauty made by the arranging of the hair in soft waves and curls, or even in classic lines. There are perhaps those of Berry Wall's regime who the bonnet to the chignon, but an ornamental pin evolved from the little fastening much used when veils were worn. This pin is still seen in elaborate forms, making a conspicuous ornament that serves as trimming on some of the tailored hats, and even on the turbans of metal stuffs and satin that are so modish.

In the better shops where Parisian novelties are featured, many attractive hat pins are presented. There are countless designs; straight bars having brilliantly jeweled ends, large arrows of gold and onyx encrusted with brilliants or rhinestones. A bit of jade in curving line is tipped with brilliants, and countless other novelties are shown in coral, agate, crystal and in the different colored comsitions that imitate almost every jewel, precious and semi-precious.

Monotony is never endurable. Designers have with much artistry and quite gradually devised other trimming for the new hats. Novelty feathers, ribbon bands and rosettes, leather straps and buckles have been shown on the successful modes of the season. Flowers have been used with much restraint—usually but one handsome blossom, or a tight nosegay of conventionalized posies of silk or lacquer, for which there is now a perfect craze. These are interesting, sometimes rather startling, while the ornamental pins have gone somewhat to extremes.

On one imported model shown lately by a swaggar milliner the flowers resembled a spray of glass blossoms taken from a table garnishment, and on another a pin studded solid with rhinestones was amusingly shaped in the form of a donkey.

The most artistic motif in millinery lately introduced is that of needlework. Pett-point is the very newest fancy, and applique, embroidery, stitching are all tremendously popular.

Introduced in the South.

The creation of styles for Palm Beach and the other fashionable southern playgrounds made a market for the very newest ideas in hats. These express more of art and beauty than anything else in millinery that has been presented for many a day. They are forerunners of the fashions that will prevail during the coming spring and summer. The new hats are modish, but not extreme, as compared with the shapes in vogue a year ago.

One tendency to the eccentric is seen in the peaked crown of the fabric hats, a reminder, not altogether charming, of the aborigine contour of head. Some of the most exaggerated in this shape are made of heavy silk cut in four shaped pieces, joined with needlework to form a sharp point at the top and having no other trimming than a narrow band about the bottom of the crown.

In some models an ornamental pin or some such trifle is added at one side. The soft felt and straw shapes of this sort have a grotesque treatment, a bow-knot, rosette or bunch of flowers finishing the very tip. Thus far this merry style lacks endorsement among the really smart women, and its vogue is doubtful.

Here and there a clever bit of a hat done in this manner is shown. One in beige-colored felt, soft as suede, has a moderately high crown slightly rounded, the top being entirely covered with a plaque of little flowers in browns and yellows, with a fringe of buds and moss, rather too suggestive of a thatched roof to be taken seriously. The brim of this chic little chapeau is narrow and rolls softly away from the face. Another, similar in shape, is of white felt with a narrow brim band of white ribbon, a large black poppy covering the square top of the crown.

Needlework Plays a Part.

Needlework distinguishes the newest models in hats, placing some of them almost among the fine arts. At least they are original and intriguing to the last degree. Nothing shown among the advance styles has more distinction than a model in a pliable narrow braid cleverly woven with angora wool, the long hairs making a shaggy surface. About the crown is applied a pattern of thistles and leaves cut from felt in shades of green, sketchy, yet boldly effective.

Many white hats are shown, of felt, milan, silk and other materials, some self-trimmed, some having just a band of ribbon, a strap and buckle of leather, or a simple ornament made of ribbon, flowers or feathers done very simply. Grosgrain ribbon, fluted, plaited or made into stiff rosettes, is considered very smart and is seen on some of the models from the best houses.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

CROSS-WORD PUZZLE No. 31.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

French Hat of Red Milan, Faced With White and Trimmed With a Strap of Black Leather.

could give the date of the poke bonnet which the swaggar flapper of today recognized only as a part of the uniform of a benevolent organization. In its sweetest form the poke bonnet, as a fashionable chapeau, concealed little but the back hair, and greatly enhanced the coquetry of a pretty face. Its successor, the cloche is not easily accounted for and, try as one may, it seems quite impossible to escape from its unflattering shape.

A few variants have made their way in the last year as an opening wedge to more lovely things. The uncompromising down brim has been rolled back slightly from the face, disclosing eyebrows and sometimes the fine edge of a marcel or the dip of a curl; and on one side, following the line of a permanent wave over the ear.

Only last year were any perceptible changes in millinery seen. Several old favorites were featured—the continental, perennial and unlimited in its variants; the sailor and other shapes tending to more generous form and wider brim. Trimming was reduced almost to the non-existent point, and some of the most swaggar hats, particularly the sports shape, were literally unadorned. As a style they have been so successful, once taste was adjusted to them, that the old-fashioned hats on which no vacant space was found seemed somewhat of a horror.

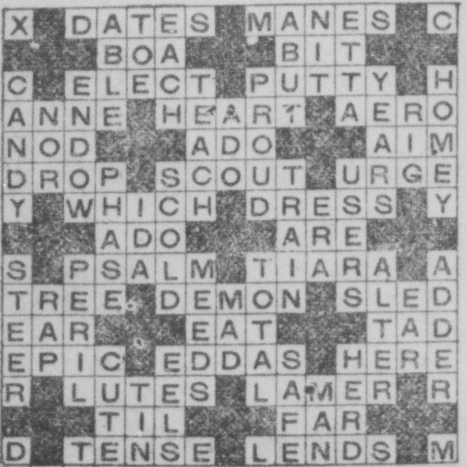

Hat Pins Are Offered.
Like everything else that comes to hand for an obvious economy, the unadorned hat cheapened, and fashion-milliners found a way to redeem that brought the hat pin—not the utility device that anchored

CROSS WORD PUZZLE VS. CUBISTS AND JAZZ

Doctor Says New Mental Fad Has Great Stabilizing Power In Life of Today.

The cross word puzzle is a rival of the radio in the salvation of the younger generation, which without them, would be overwhelmed by things appealing directly to the senses or to the emotions, according to Dr. Louisa Burns in an article in the Journal of the American Osteopathic Association for March.

"Cubist, jazz, impressionistic, flaming—these are the adjectives which qualify fads of the sensory type," she says. "Free verse, bare legs, modern dance steps, 'sexified' movies, books and pictures have been the subject of conversation, itself not especially brainy in type.

"Then came radio. Young men and women and boys and girls began to use their fingers, and they developed mechanical skill. Thus they developed the anterior lobes of the brain, especially the centers on the left side. They had to study abstruse things—electrical, radio waves, ether and such things. Thus they began to develop the parietal lobes of the brain, chiefly on the right side.

"Next came the cross words puzzle. Everybody works at them. Even people who cannot handle radio sets can handle a dictionary. They can be carried on a street car. The fad has spread everywhere.

Young people whose brains have been subjected to the influences of radio and cross word puzzles have already set up and in good running order the nervous mechanisms necessary for making good judgments and for deciding wisely their own personal conduct."

NOTABLE DISASTERS IN PAST 25 YEARS

Notable disasters during the past 25 years in the "tornado belt" of the Middle West and Southwest, include these:

June 28, 1924—More than 100 killed, 3,000 injured at Lorain and Sandusky, Ohio.

March 27, 1924—Twenty-four killed in Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Ohio.

July, 1923—Sixty-three killed in Pomeroy, Iowa.

April 25, 1923—Nearly 100 killed in various Oklahoma towns and villages.

June 23, 1919—Sixty killed, 400 buildings destroyed at Fergus Falls, Minn.

May 31, 1917—Sixty-seven killed and 200 injured in Southeastern Missouri and Southern Illinois.

March 13, 1913—Loss of life in Peoria, Ill., Vincennes, Ind., and towns in Louisiana and Tennessee.

April 24, 1908—Nearly 500 killed in Northern Kansas and Southern Nebraska.

May 9, 1905—Thirty killed at Marquette, Kansas.

May 11, 1905—One hundred and thirty killed at Snyder, Okla.

"Wave" Ruined

A party of Broadstairs (Eng.) motorists ran their car over the edge of a cliff, narrowly escaping death. Lady Duncan, sitting in the back seat, complained to rescuers that the accident had "spoiled her permanent wave."

Land of Cockaigne

Cockaigne was a fabled land invented as a satire on Avalon. It was a place of joy and luxury. The houses were built of things to eat, the rivers ran wine, roasted geese paraded the streets.

Islam, Not Mohammedanism

The proper name for the religion of the followers of Mohammed is not Mohammedanism, but Islam, according to competent authorities. Islam is an Arabic word meaning "submission to God."

White Specks on Nails

In China, white specks on the nails are regarded as signs of coming evil, a belief old New England also shared. In Germany they are held as omens of good luck, good health and wealth.

WE PRINT THE NEWS

PRAISE FOR CATALOG OF DR. B. R. BALES.

Florists' Review Compliments Triangle Farm Production.

A recent issue of The Florists' Review, published in New York, has the following to say in reference to the flower catalog put out a short time ago by Dr. B. R. Bales, of this city:

"Twenty Acres of Flowers," a well printed catalog of gladioli, dahlias, cannas, lilies, perennials and annuals. Gladioli and dahlias predominate, occupying about thirty-six of the total forty-four good-sized pages. The Dr. B. R. Bales, the proprietor, is "an extensive grower of flowers for the cut flower market" and has been in the business long enough to accumulate a large stock of plants, this is his first catalog, as he states in an ably written and witty introduction, under the heading, "We Make Our Bow."

Many of the descriptions of varieties also have in them an element of picturesque, "snappy" originality, and thus are entertaining as well as instructive.

TORNADO FREAKS.

Chicago, Ill., March, 21.—Jesse Pankey of Harco, near De Soto, who was returning to his home from St. Louis, with his wife and two small children in an automobile when Wednesday's tornado approached, today described a fantasy of the winds.

He swung into a garage to escape, Pankey said, and as he stepped from the automobile the roof of the garage was whirled away.

Next, he asserted, his car was tossed into the air and carried off with his wife and children in it. He also was lifted and blown five blocks, alighting uninjured on the Illinois Central railroad tracks, he continued. His wife and children later were found in a freshly ploughed field, and they were only slightly injured, Pankey stated. He added that the last time he saw his automobile it was still sailing.

Many wild freaks were reported in Wednesday's tornado which struck Franklin and adjoining counties in southern Illinois, leaving death and destruction in its wake. Murphysboro tax receipts of Wednesday date were picked up at Fairfield, 50 miles northeast.

A barber chair was found in a field near here was a mystery, as no barber shop was known to have been in the stricken West Franklin area. Presumably the chair had been transported through the air from some other town. A frame building of the West Franklin water plant was left standing untouched while large trees on all sides of it were snapped off or torn up by the roots. Hundreds of automobiles here had their tops blown off or were hurled upside down or virtually demolished. Most of a tin can dump was picked up from one side of the West Frankfort-Benton highway and transferred to the other side.

W. E. Remley, tie inspector for a Poplar Bluff, Mo., Lumber Co., was in a restaurant eating when the storm struck. "The roof went off first," he said, "and then all four sides were swept away. I was left sitting on the floor with nothing around me. Then I left."

No Modern Machinery

Old-fashioned agricultural implements are being used in Sicily because of the conservatism and limited funds of farmers there.

Shows Nervous Ailment

By aid of phonograph records of the voice physicians of London have been able to detect certain nervous diseases.

DR. HARRY E. FOSDICK

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, who as the Baptist pastor of the First Presbyterian church in New York has been the center of the controversy between the fundamentalists and the modernists, has resigned because the Presbyterian general assembly demanded that he either give up his pastorate or become a Presbyterian by subscribing to the confession of faith.

CAISSON CONSTRUCTION

On American Insurance Union Job Nears Completion.

The contractor for the new A. I. U. building, Columbus, predicts that he will have finished the caisson work for the new building by the first of May. There are at present seventeen completed caissons, and the time when twenty-two more of the total of 44 will be finished is rapidly approaching. This leaves only five caissons to be started. It is estimated that about two-thirds of the actual caisson construction has been done. With the favorable weather which comes at this season of the year the work can be expected to progress more rapidly.

A graphic conception of the depth of the caissons may be obtained by realizing that they lack only fifteen feet of going as far below the curb as the nearby Deshler Hotel rises above it. The depth of the caissons averages about 112 feet and the height of the Deshler is about 130 feet.

AMUSEMENTS

Gloria Swanson's latest picture, "Her Love Story" boasts a truly extraordinary cast and it is due to the fact that Allan Dwan, who directed it for the Paramount organization takes the word "realism" seriously. "Her Love Story" is based upon Frank Tuttle's adaptation of "Her Majesty the Queen" by Mary Roberts Rinehart. It is a touching romance of love and mother love in the atmosphere of royalty.

Gloria plays the part of the queen. The other members of the all star cast include such capable players as Ian Keith, George Fawcett, Mario Majeroni and Donald Hall. Now here's where Allan Dwan's mania for realism comes in. He wasn't satisfied to have merely actors, no matter how able, interpret the various roles. He wanted the genuine, dyed-in-the-wool nobility—men and women who were just as much at home in a European court as the average man is on Main street. And he got them! So that when you see the Baroness de Hedemarn or General Lotjensky on the screen, remember you are looking at people who spent most of their life hobnobbing with real kings and queens.

Gloria shows us in the story that the life of a queen is not all that it's cracked up to be. Not that being a queen hasn't got its advantages, because it certainly has! On the other hand there are so many disadvantages that the average girl who sees the picture will be glad that she wasn't born to the royal purple! The photoplay will be on view for two days at the Met theater beginning next Monday.

x HARTMAN THEATER
x x x x x x x x

Sam H. Harris will present Irving Berlin's third annual Music Box Revue at the Hartman theater, Columbus, Monday night, March 23, for a week's engagement with Wednesday and Saturday matinees. The Music Box Revue has proved its worth these three years and is an established institution and a marked favorite with theater goers. All last year the new revue was presented to crowded houses at the Music Box theater in New York and, of course, the elaborate production with its intricate under stage and overstage effects and its exquisitely beautiful scenery and costumes, will be shown here just as it was in New York. Beautiful as it is to the eye, it is also true that in the way of fun music and girls nothing in theatrical presentation compares with the Music Box Revue. In New York the third annual revue with the music and lyrics by Irving Berlin and staged by Hassard Short was considered far and away the best of the three, and the cast the finest ever assembled in a revue. Here are some of the principals in the company of one hundred: Florence Moore, John Steel, Joseph Santley, Ivy Sawyer, Johnny Burt, Solly Ward, Florence O'Donnishawn, Hugh Cameron, Phil Baker, Ruth Thomas, Nelson Snow, Charles Columbus Dorothy Dilley and three Wainwright sisters, Bepa, Vista, Eric Titus and Helen Rich. There will be a special augmented orchestra for the local engagement of the Music Box Revue. Mail orders now.

CORN STAFF OF LIFE IN MEXICO

Cereal Forms Important Part of Food Supply in Many Counties.

Washington, D. C.—Mexico's corn crop moved up a few pegs this year. Interesting economics and sociology are wrapped up in such a report, according to a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society which points out that, like adequate rice supplies in China, potatoes in Ireland, or wheat in Russia, a good stock of corn in Mexico is likely to contribute toward general contentment and stability.

"Corn or maize is the staff of life in Mexico," says the bulletin, "but to the American used to his substantial and sizable loaf, it is likely to appear a somewhat frail prop. Most of the Mexican corn is not milled into meal or flour. It is laboriously crushed with small stone rollers by hand, in millions of kitchens and dooryards. The crushed grain is then moistened into a stiff paste and cooked on a griddle into what the average visitor from north of the Rio Grande would term a 'tough, flabby pancake.' These are tortillas, the most generally used articles of food in Mexico. They are cooked in the home, in restaurants, over braziers in the market-place, or taken cold by laborers in their lunch packets. Nor are they unknown on the tables of the prosperous. Wherever food appears in Mexico the tortilla stands well to the fore.

"Not only does the tortilla look unappetizing to the outsider; it is sure to prove unappetizing if he follows his first impulse and treats it like a pancake, for it is tough and rather tasteless. But treated as bread, the tortilla will make a much better impression. The proper trick is to roll it tightly so that it will be manageable and will retain its heat. It then becomes a bread-stick whose spiraled end will melt a bit of butter and furnish a really delectable bite.

To Eat Tortillas.

"If one casts aside outlander notions of etiquette he can enjoy his tortilla even more. If the rolled end is dipped into the fiery red sauce of chile con carne or the highly seasoned gravy of a stew, it furnishes delightful morsels. Among the millions rather than the thousands of Mexicans, however, tortillas are eaten day in and day out with boiled brown beans.

"Corn contributes to another important Mexican dish, the tamale. "Indian corn or maize is almost universally believed by botanists to have originated in the Western Hemisphere, probably in Central America, upland South America, or Mexico. It was wholly unknown in Europe and the Near East until after the discovery of America; but it is so prolific a crop and the grain is so satisfactory as a food for both man and live stock, that its culture spread rapidly over the world after the sixteenth century. The United States continues to be the dominant producer of maize, but Argentina is getting to be a considerable rival and exports millions of bushels.

"Throughout Portugal, in parts of Spain, in southern France, in the Po valley of Italy, and in the countries along the lower Danube, maize is a valuable crop and the grain an important food material. The American from the 'corn belt' who made a trip through these countries would have surprises aplenty in the different methods of handling and raising corn. In Portugal he would find corn not being 'shelled' by machine or hand, but the ears spread out on a threshing floor, being beaten with flails.

"In Italy corn is seldom made into bread. The meal is made into thick porridge containing bits of meat and called 'polenta.' A coarse bread of maize meal is sold on the streets of Constantinople.

When Corn Is Not Corn.

"In Egypt, South Africa, Syria, Persia, India, and even China, American corn is grown, though it is given a different name in each locality, ranging from 'mealies' to 'Turkish wheat.' The stalks are valuable for fuel in the almost treeless Nile delta, and are used also by the fallahen in building their simple huts.

"Certain old records in China indicate that corn was received at the court as tribute from parts of the empire before the discovery of America. This has been taken by some students as pointing to an Asiatic origin of the plant, but the general opinion is that America was the home of corn, and that it appeared in China before the voyage of Columbus. Its presence rather indicates a pre-Columbian traffic between America and Asia.

"In the United States corn finds its most important use as a food for live stock. Millions of bushels, however, are exported to Europe, and other millions are used as raw materials in industries. Corn starch, corn oil and glucose are the principal products now manufactured.

"Much corn is used also as a food in the United States, especially in the South and parts of the West. The dishes prepared from corn meal are to a considerable extent localized. The Southerner who has not tasted the fluffy, sweetened corn cake of the North, the Northerner who has never eaten the golden-crust 'egg-bread' or the foamy spoon bread of the South and those in both regions who are too far removed from the farm to know the nutty 'crackling pones' have missed some of America's most characteristic foods."

THE NEW NEIL HOUSE

The new Neil House will be a structure of which the city may well be proud, a beautiful and important addition to the downtown section of Columbus. Contractors have carried the work ahead rapidly even during the changeable weather of winter and the concrete structure is up to the eleventh floor. Workmen are placing the stone and brick in place on the outer walls as rapidly as the concrete is ready for the work. The building will have a broad frontage on High street, will be one of the monumental structures in the business section and will emphasize the section of the city in which it is located.

It will be many times larger than the old Neil House, that had a prominent place in the popular fancy of Ohio and the traveling public for a number of generations, and will have a grandeur in appearance the old building never could have been given. In one respect it will be like the old Neil House. When the old structure was completed it was strictly modern and fully up to date according to the standards of the day. The new Neil will be representative of the best thought in architecture, modern equipment and arrangements according to the standards of the present day. It will be an important aid to the city in making ready for the handling of conventions and other large gatherings, a work the city is pushing with vigor, and will be an addition of much importance to the square about the Statehouse. —Columbus Journal.

The Neil was always a favorite hostelry for Circleville people in years gone by and as it is hard to "learn old dogs new tricks," the New Neil will no doubt be as popular.

The Letter From "Old Top"

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright.)

DICK TRAVERS, successful business man, glanced over the little string of pictures at the foot of his morning paper and sighed. "Bringing Up Phyllis" had been running as a "comic strip" for some three years and a half, and only in the last few weeks had begun to show the effect of pure brain fag.

"Poor 'Old Pop,'" sympathized Dick, "these pictures are being wrung out of a brain already squeezed dry of ideas. I know what it is. Didn't I do the same sort of thing for five years?"

The outcome of Dick's line of thought was that a letter found its way to the desk of a young lady who was even then rumpling a head of glorious red hair in an effort to think out an idea that was not entirely eaten by moths. Of late her "Bringing Up Phyllis," signed "Old Top," had been giving her brainstorm after brainstorm, and this morning it seemed as if she must just quit the whole game and go to chicken raising or some less nerve-racking means of making money.

She opened the letter listlessly, and while she read it every type of emotion known to a red-headed girl swept over her.

"Dear 'Old Top,'" the letter ran, "your work in 'Bringing Up Phyllis' has been decidedly stale of late. It shows the signs of a brain garnered of every vestige of fruit. I am sending you some ideas for pictures. I did this kind of work for five years, and at the end of three was looking for the nearest and deepest canal into which to toss my weary body and brain—so great was the strain. Most of the funny men go potty or take to absinthe, if they can get it, so you just buck up and use these ideas. I have far more money now than sense, so don't suggest any fifty-fifty buncomb." The letter was signed, "Yours in sympathy, Pal."

Old Top's ladylike heart flopped. Pal was the name of a cartoonist who had given her more laughs than all the rest put together. She had often wondered what had become of him.

She scanned the ideas swiftly and then grasped her pen and swung in some powerful strokes for an hour or two. After sending them in to press she donned a most bewitching wee hat of scarlet and dull blue and went out for a walk in the park. It was the first time she had felt free for some time.

Before she returned to her small flat in the evening, Old Top had found out from one of the editorial offices that Pal had cast the roar of press-dorm from his ears and was out on a small farm on Long Island raising prize cattle and his name was Dick Travers.

Next morning when Travers opened his mail there was a letter from Old Top. He read it with amusement and huge interest.

"Dear Pal," it ran, "I cannot thank you for your kind interest in my moldy cartoons. I was not only looking for the nearest and deepest canal, but was also seeking a big revolver and a gas pipe, but from all these methods you have saved me. Would you, if you are not too awfully attached with wife and such like, come and have dinner with me Thursday evening. Come in tweeds, if that is what you have on at the time, but there isn't room in my small flat for any of the prize cows."

Old Top gave the address and the flat number, and thitherward in brown tweeds drove Dick. He was generously armed with a basket of new-laid eggs, fresh butter and a bottle of thick cream.

"These city chaps don't often get the real thing," he told himself by way of excusing the perhaps too human side of his nature.

When he found himself in the artistic wee flat and confronted by a big genial type of man Dick was delighted that he had accepted the meeting.

"I'm mighty glad to meet you, Old Top," he said by way of greeting.

"I say," laughed the other, "don't accuse me of anything like that. Here's Old Top." And with that he turned to a diminutive girl with a shock of red hair who held out a most warm and cordial hand to the astonished Dick Travers.

"It is certainly good of Pal to come and have dinner with us," she was saying with a mischievous smile, and Dick knew that things were happening to his heart right then and there.

But with an awful fear in his mind he wondered if the big man was Old Top's husband. With all his soul he hoped this wonderful girl had not been snatched into the matrimonial net, and therefore was not eligible to be dragged swiftly out to his farm, and there, among the prize cows, draw cartoons to her heart's content, and also his own.

"My brother," said Old Top sweetly seeming to divine his suspense, "and I have always wanted to meet you."

"Then that's that," laughed Dick happily, and unburdened himself of butter, eggs and cream.

Phyllis would certainly be well "brought up" after that.

Mr. Fickardt.

Dear Sir:—

A few words in regard to your Poultry Drops. My flock had a sneezing cold that developed into Deadly Roup. After I began with your medicine I lost only a few birds which were badly infected, the sneezing in the rest of my flock began to disappear.

In a few weeks' time there was a great difference in my flock of 200 English Leghorn pullets, they began to develop and get red combs and wattles. I am sure Fickardt's Roup and Cholera Drops will help in egg production, for a healthy bird is bound to lay if it gets the proper feeds.

On Such a Night in Spring

By RUPERT ROLLAND

(Copyright.)

NORTON, dining alone at the little restaurant on his first night in New York after five years of wandering, remembered how often Joe Stickney and he had sat at that very table on spring evenings and talked of romance. And now Norton had had his five years of strange countries and Joe Stickney had married a brunette with long-lashed violet eyes.

He would like to know what had happened to Joe and his Helen, so, finishing dinner, Norton sought out a telephone booth. He found the name and the number, and a woman's voice answered his call. "This is Roger Norton," he said. "Mrs. Stickney. Joe and I used to be Damon and Pythias five years ago. I'm lonely in this big city. May I come up tonight?"

"Please do, Mr. Norton," came the answer. "I've often heard Joe speak of you."

A maid let him in at the apartment and showed him into a drawing room, pleasantly illuminated by a single rose-shaded lamp. A slim, dark-haired woman with long-lashed eyes held out her hand. "Joe isn't at home," she said, "but I'm expecting him soon. He went back to his law office right after we'd finished dinner."

"I hope he doesn't often do that," said Norton.

"He works pretty hard, poor boy. But I know he'd want to see you. Shall we sit by this open window? The air's so fresh tonight. You've been away five years? What have you been doing?"

"Nothing so interesting as what Joe has," Norton answered, taking the chair she drew forward. "We both vowed five years ago that we'd capture romance. Joe found it, but I—well, it's always just over the next hill for me. Joe was the sensible fellow—a happy marriage."

"Yes?" The long lashes hid the violet eyes that were looking out at the night sky.

Norton caught the question in the low voice, and wondered. Was Joe like so many other men? Had he won this exquisite creature, only to give her bodily comforts and spend all his hours working at his career? On such a night in spring! To be slaving at his office. Quickly he appraised the situation. Money—yes, it was evident in the room, in that simple gown. But romance—fled out of the window.

"You're an idealist, aren't you?" It was the woman who was speaking.

"Yes, I am," he answered defiantly. "We both were five years ago."

"And is the reason that you are still to be found in the fact that your romance is always just over the next hill?"

He flushed. She was looking at him, and her eyes held his fascinated.

"I don't believe it," he said. "I believe I'd still keep my ideals, keep them more than ever after I'd found—what Joe has."

"I wasn't talking of Joe," she reminded him with a little half-laugh. "I know Joe very well—even better, perhaps, than you do."

Again he caught that little note that made him wonder, that piqued and stirred his senses. He looked down at the slim hand that lay upon the chair-arm. "Good old Joe," he said. "I suppose a man does change. And life in New York is such a struggle."

"But you have everything before you. You're still free and unfettered."

"Yes, that's what the bachelor says. And yet when I come back from my wanderings, like Ulysses, having avoided the pitfalls, I find myself dreadfully lonely. I thought at dinner tonight that was a high price to pay."

"Poor Roger Norton," she murmured. "His best friend caught by the sirens."

There was mockery in her voice, but something also that set his pulses beating. He looked at the lovely profile, now turned again to the stars of the spring night. And suddenly he forgot himself. "I wish I'd been caught instead," he said. "I'd never have struggled loose."

She faced him for a second, her eyes startled, then misty.

"Forgive me," he muttered. "You—the night—something has turned my head."

"Mine too, I'm afraid," she said. "However—" And she brushed her hand across her gown as if to wipe something away.

"What do you mean?" he demanded. "You're—you're not lonely, too?"

In the silence that followed his question there came the sound of a key in a distant lock, then steps in the hall. Norton got to his feet. Still, fascinated, he gazed at the lovely dark head turned away from him.

Someone came into the room. "Well, by Jove!" cried the cheery voice of Joe Stickney. "I declare if it isn't Roger Norton, as large as life!"

Norton wheeled, his face aflame. Mechanically he took the hand that Stickney held out to him.

"My word, but I'm glad to see you," declared Stickney. "Sorry that Helen is away on a visit; but I guess my little sister-in-law has made you pretty comfortable."

"Sister-in-law!" echoed Norton, glancing at the girl by the window.

The young woman stood up. "I'm afraid I haven't made Mr. Norton so very comfortable," she said, avoiding that man's eyes. "Something got into me tonight. I suppose it's that old spring fever."

Roger Norton smiled. "I'm glad I happened along when I did," he said. "Spring fever's so much jollier when it's shared with somebody."

HERDS OF GOATS HAMPER IN ISLAND COFFEE AREA

Hundreds of the Animals Killed in Drive in the Kona District of Hawaii.

New York.—A description of the coffee-raising industry in the Kona district of the Island of Hawaii, which is expected within a few years to help relieve the frequent disturbances in the coffee market here, is given by George T. Armitage of Honolulu. He believes that the growth of the Kona product has been retarded to some extent by goats and, to a greater degree, by the rapidly spreading guava plant. "They told us that everything grows in Kona," said Mr. Armitage, "and there was ample evidence to prove it. It is the proverbial Hawaiian land of milk and honey, whose coffee has an aroma not equaled even in Brazil. While coffee is the principal crop, they also raise tobacco, hemp, cotton and even sugar. The only sugar mill in the territory operated by Japanese is there.

"Coffee grows everywhere, and it is even to be seen springing luxuriously out of rocks where apparently one could not scrape up a peck of soil on an acre of ground. The chief enemies of coffee and other Kona crops are guava and goats, and, unfortunately, guava is about the only thing the goat won't eat. The ranchers hope some day that an insect similar to those which have destroyed other pests will be found to cope with the guava.

"The goats are so numerous that the ranchers conduct drives several times a week which net hundreds of these animals, yet they make only a small impression on the thousands that are eating up the crops. In one drive last year, by a combined army of boy scouts and soldiers, nearly 7,000 goats were captured. Almost as many more escaped, and afterward the participants in the roundup had to go out seeking the boy scouts, who became exhausted and ruined their shoes scrambling over the lava.

"Rather unsatisfactory attempts have been made to poison the goats, and an effort to reduce their number by the use of dogs was frustrated by the acumen of the goats in remaining on the roughest variety of the lava, which in a few moments reduces the paws of a pursuing dog to pulp."

Mr. Armitage, who made a tour over the entire island of Hawaii, largest in the territory, told of finding what he describes as "probably the largest bed in Christendom," at Kealahou. "It is an immense four-poster of the old school," he said, "built entirely of wood from the koa tree, and so vast that it fills an entire room. A whole family of large size could sleep in it and not disturb each other. It was built in the days when koa was plentiful by a woman who wanted to do something different, and a glimpse of the bed convinces one that she succeeded. Koa once covered the mountains, but foraging cattle, by exposing the roots, have killed nearly all of these valuable trees."

At Kealahou Mr. Armitage found a native Hawaiian woman who asserted that she was born in the year that King Kamehameha I died, 105 years ago. Residents of the town who have checked up on incidents which the aged woman remembered believe she is fully as old as she claims to be.

My Favorite Stories

By IRVIN S. COBB

Spoken From the Soul

Nick was the grizzle-headed factum of an assembly room in a certain southern town. This story, which has to do with him, possesses one merit if it possesses none other—it has the merit of being true.

According to local gossip Nick was a sorely henpecked man. It was said that when displeased with him Aunt Ellie, his mastodontic wife, had a way of tying his hands behind him and then correcting him with a bed slat. Sometimes she corrected him so thoroughly that he limped for a week afterward and sat down only on cushioned chairs. If there were no cushioned chairs handy he preferred to stand.

Yet Nick bore the secret of his domestic tragedy bravely. He never swore out a warrant for Ellie; never publicly complained of the roughness of her disciplinary methods.

But, as the saying goes, the worm will turn, although why it should turn, seeing that a worm is the same on both sides, no one knows. Nick didn't exactly turn, but one time he did bare his inner convictions without exactly going into details.

Some ladies were decorating the assembly rooms for a wedding reception which was to follow the ceremony at the bride's home and Nick was helping them.

"So they's fixin' to have 'nother marriage, is they?" said Nick, half to himself as he unraveled an armful of southern smilax. "Well, seems lak folks will keep on gettin' married." He fetched a soft, pensive sigh under his breath.

One of the ladies overheard him. She knew something of the life Nick was said to lead in the privacy of his home. Mischief led her to speak.

"Why, Uncle Nick," she said, "you surely haven't any grudge against marriage, have you?"

"Oh, none, not fur other folks," said Nick. "But, Miss May, speakin' fur myse'f in strictest confidence to you, I'll jes' say dis: Ef I wuzn't, I wouldn't."

Named for Two Presidents

The town of Jackson, N. H., has borne the names of two Presidents of the United States in the course of its history. Originally called New Madbury, it was renamed Adams in 1802 in honor of President John Adams. In 1829 its present name was adopted as a tribute to President Andrew Jackson.

Bad People Not So Plenty

I have heard all my days warning of bad men and women, but known few; and I have reached three-score and ten. I have traveled far, and haven't much farther to go, but upon my honor the rarest thing I know is a completely bad man or woman.—E. W. Howe, the Atchison Globe Man, in Collier's.

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

FIRST TO RAISE ENDOWMENT QUOTA

To Kentucky department of the American Legion goes the honor of being the first state to name the chairman of its state committee to carry on the American Legion endowment fund movement. To that department also goes the honor of having the first post (Sterns post, Sterns, Ky.) to raise its quota in this movement.

No small part of the credit for these achievements belongs to Frank Dillman Rash of Earlington, the department commander. Mr. Rash brought to the tasks of the commandery a long experience in business, in National Guard and army problems, in fraternal circles and in public affairs.

Born at St. Charles, Ky., on September 1, 1878, Mr. Rash received the degree of Bachelor of Arts from South Kentucky college in 1897. He then spent four years in the study of mining engineering and metallurgy at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, graduating with the Bachelor of Science degree in 1910.

In that year he became assistant engineer with the St. Bernard Mining company of Earlington, advancing through various positions to the pres-dency and general managership in 1920. He is now vice president of the West Kentucky Coal company, in charge of the Earlington division, which now controls the properties of the St. Bernard company. He has been very active in mining circles and has contributed a number of technical articles on this and allied subjects.

Passing through various grades in the Kentucky National Guard, he was major and brigade adjutant of the First Kentucky brigade of infantry on the Mexican border. He was called into service in the inspector general's division of the United States army in July, 1918, and assigned to duty in the War department. He was discharged in December following and now holds the rank of lieutenant colonel in the reserves.

A charter member of Joseph Vernon Lloyd post No. 2 of the American Legion at Earlington, the new commander was post chaplain in 1923 and 1924. He was elected department vice commander in 1923 and commander in 1924. At various times in the past 20 years he has held the position of councilman and mayor of Earlington. He is married and has one son.

Recent World Conflict as Help or Hindrance

Whether the "most colossal war of history shall be a benefit or a detriment to the world depends upon how we, who were left in the world, normal and little affected, shall use our opportunities," declared James A. Drab, national commander of the American Legion, in a recent radio message broadcast to veterans throughout the country from Indianapolis. "If the World war is to prove a greater help than a hindrance to mankind," he said, "those of us left behind, whom the war has not so deeply scarred, are the instruments under God to make it so."

Legion Most Valuable

"The Iowa Legionnaire" says a man of its acquaintance belongs to twenty-four different organizations, including the Legion, and that the Legion costs him less and is more valuable to him than any of the others. The world's champion "joiner" produced credentials to show that his fraternal spirit was actually expansive enough to embrace two dozen affiliations.

Too Honest

Six-year-old Billie found a pocket-book and made haste to return it to its owner. "You're an honest lad," the latter told him, magnanimously. "Here, I'll give you a dime." "Aw, you don't hafta," replied Billie, turning away. "I kept a quarter out."—American Legion Weekly.
